[1] The Philosophy Major requires at least two consecutive Foreign Language courses, reaching at least the 202 level. Incoming students must take a placement exam to determine their starting level. For example, a student who starts at 101 must take 101, 102, 103, 201 and 202 to complete the requirement, and a student who starts at 202 must take 202 and 203.
[2] Students unprepared for MATH 101 should take MATH 100 in Term 1, MATH 101 in Term 2, and MATH 102 in Term 3 or Term 4.
[3] A “w” next to a course number indicates that this course can fulfill a writing-intensive requirement. All students must pass three writing-intensive courses after their freshman year. Two must be in a student's major. The third can be in any discipline. Students are advised to take one writing-intensive class each year, beginning with the sophomore year, and to avoid “clustering” these courses near the end of their matriculation. Transfer students need to meet with an academic advisor to review the number of writing-intensive courses required to graduate. For the most up-to-date list of writing-intensive courses, students should check the Writing Intensive Course List at the University Writing Center. Students scheduling their courses can also conduct a search for courses with the attribute "WI" to bring up a list of all writing-intensive courses available that term.
