“Global Perspectives on the US Presidential Election”

Wednesday October 1st
12:00-1:30 pm

The American political system can be confusing, overwhelming or irrelevant to anyone, but this is especially true for International students. Although they cannot vote in US elections, many issues related to these elections are similar to issues in their own countries and the outcomes are likely to affect their lives. This panel discussion – open to all students, faculty, and staff - is designed to encourage audience participation.

Upcoming International Cafés: October 29, November 19

Each month, the International Café provides a forum for discussion around international or global themes for all members of the Drexel Community. We know that there are many people on our campuses who are interested in discussing contemporary issues of our world and in presenting scholarly research with an international component. The International Café is a response to this interest and also an opportunity for Drexel faculty, students, and staff to meet in an informal setting and share ideas and experiences.
