

PHOTOGRAPHY

The photography curriculum supports students in the discovery of their own photographic vision and style, leveraging a mix of aesthetics, technology, creativity and technique to convey their unique artistic communication. Through a hands-on program blending traditional processes with the latest digital technologies, the photography curriculum provides all the tools necessary for aspiring artists/photographers to achieve a breadth of experience not generally developed in traditional fine art or commercial photography programs. Photography students receive the same photography foundation courses for all majors until the third year of study, at which point they design a more individualized path of study for their senior thesis process.

Employers who have hired a Drexel student include:

Jonathan Pushnik Photography
Seraphin Gallery
The Print Center
Amanda Stevenson Photography
Aurora Imaging Company, LLC
Jason Varney Photography
John Romeo Photography
Metropolitan Museum of Art
Edwynn Houk Gallery

Photographic illustration, photojournalism, fashion and fine art photography, digital imaging, and photo-related activities such as managing photographic archives are among the fields in which our recent graduates have established themselves.

Students wanting specific information about the major are encouraged to stop by the department office in Nesbitt Hall, call the department at 215-895-2390, or visit their website at www.drexel.edu/westphal/.
